THE PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

Happy New Year Everyone!

It's that time of year to set goals, make plans and strive to improve in the coming year. That's what the new officers and board are going to do. We will keep you informed as the year progresses of the exciting things in store for the club. Want to thank the out going officers and board for all the time and effort they gave thru out the year.

The club's Christmas dinner was fabulous with a good turn out and excellent food. The best part of the evening was the 162 prize drawings. With that many prizes it felt like everyone won something, but I think Doug Nyholm won more then his fair share. The big winners were Bret Tea, Chris Larson, Richard Blaylock, Eldon Farnsworth, Tom Davis and Michael Norman who when home with Gold, that is, gold coins. It really pays to be active in the club.

We are going to do something different for January's club meeting. It's going too be held at the newly remolded and enlarged "All About Coins" store. Parking is available around back of the store from 11th East and across the street at Barns & Noble. Bob Campbell will tell us a little about his store and then we will have a UNS auction. So bring something special, up to 5 lots, to auction off. Some of the proceeds will go to help the club. These auctions are always a lot of fun.

Starting this month there will be a new spotlight each meeting. It will be called "How I got started in Coin Collecting". It will be a wonderful way to get to know each other better.

Thanks for all the encouragement and support you have shown me since I as elected President. With this support we will have a great year.

Tom Davis

JANUARY'S PROGRAM

For January we will be having our meeting at the newly remodeled "All About Coins" courtesy of Bob Campbell. The program will be our member auction. Each member can bring up to 5 lots (Lots may be multiple items) for auction. A percentage of the proceeds will benefit our club. If you can, please email your lot descriptions in advance to douglas.nyholm@comcast.net.

INVESTING IN BULLION AS A COLLECTABLE

This month's subject asks the questions, "Are modern bullion silver and gold rounds coins?" and "Are certified bullion rounds a good investment?" You will notice that I said 'rounds' and not 'coins' in the questions. My feeling is that modern bullion rounds are not the same as coins. Yes, they are round, have a face value, and look like coins. I have actually heard of people spending a Silver Eagle for gas at a gas station usually under extreme circumstances, but other than that, these bullion 'coins' virtually never enter circulation. Many people collect them by date (and variety) especially the silver Eagles, far fewer collect the gold bullion coins and I suppose that we shouldn't omit the platinum items either but these are probably collected by even far fewer people. Everything in the world is collected by someone, so who am I so say what to collect? My thoughts however are centered on helping people avoid pitfalls of purchasing something for a price which will never be attained if the item is put up for sale. In other words collecting something which has a significant cost but inevitably result in financial loss. This leads into the next question regarding 'Certified' or 'Slabbed' bullion. And to a lesser degree non-certified or Proof bullion. During my time employed at Heritage Galleries there was actually a fair amount of certified bullion coins consigned and sold by Heritage. It was the general rule of thumb that the only silver bullion commanding any premium were those graded MS-70 or PF-70. Any silver less than 70 was simply valued as silver. Secondly if it was graded 70 it almost had to be PCGS rather than NGC for any significant premium. PCGS and NGC are both top tier companies, it's just that for whatever reason PCGS is much more desirable in this arena. The rule for gold and platinum was a little different than silver in that there was a small premium for 69 graded items but still 70 was the key and always commanded much more interest than 69, either PCGS or NGC, but again PCGS had the advantage in resale value. This brings me to the final point, if one pays a premium for PCGS graded 70 bullion what is their investment potential. i.e.—"Can I have a reasonable opportunity of recouping my investment or possible making a profit with I sell?" My feeling is probably not. This sounds harsh but virtually all coin dealers will not pay much more than a very small premium for this material, and it usually sells for a significant premium. You may be able to sell for a bit higher value on EBAY but proof, slabbed, and collector bullion is a buyers market and definitely not a sellers market. The bottom line, in my opinion, if you desire to collect silver, gold, or platinum bullion (coins) be very careful what you pay, especially for certified examples. And never, never, pay a significant premium for anything graded other than by PCGS or NGC. Another hype presently being marketed is 'First Strike', 'Early Issue', or any other adjective attached to the certification label and touting the item to be something special. These labels are worth only the paper they are printed on and a way of separating the non-informed buyer from his money. If you like it, buy it, but only after thoroughly investigating what you are purchasing, becoming informed, and not spending way more than something will ever be valued at. I hope that I can save someone from losing a significant amount of money if they read this but still have great fun collecting whatever they like, even if it is high end certified bullion. Good Luck!

Doug Nyholm

COIN OF THE MONTH

GLOUCESTER COURT HOUSE TOKEN

This is a token which is so rare the inscriptions were not completely identifiable until a second specimen was discovered not too many years ago. Even as such the single known token was given a reference in the 'Red Book' for many years. The two known examples have made it possible to complete the inscriptions which reads, "GLOUCESTER CO HOUSE VIRGINIA" and RIGHAULT DAWSON ANNO DOM 1714." The Righault and Dawson families owned land in Gloucester County. The denomination depicted as XII most likely indicated the value of a schilling. This is another token or coin for the very early days of our country which is lucky to have survived at all. It poses the question of how many items were in use in colonial times of which none have survived?

January 2011 UNS Meeting Announcement

Don't forget, we will be having our January 2011 meeting at the new "All About Coins" store courtesy of Bob Campbell. This is a one-time location change, only for January.

IDENTIFY THIS COIN

COULD YOU
IDENTIFY LAST MONTH'S COIN?
IT WAS AN 1879-
CC (CAPPED MINTMARK)
MORGAN
DOLLAR.

NOW HOW ABOUT
THE COIN SHOWN
BELOW? NO HINTS,
THIS SHOULD BE EASY.

COUNTERFEIT CORNER

CHINESE COUNTERFEITS

Struck Copies
Cast Copies

Pick Up Point

General Appearance

Frequency Encountered
Very Common

Identification Difficulty
Presently easy but some deceptive coins exist.

Value
Presently low to moderate

The proliferation of counterfeit coins arriving from China is moving from crude copies to better and more deceptive coins. Some are now die struck and are of actual weight and diameter and proper silver content. Pictured above are two relatively crude examples. Not only dollars, but virtually all denominations and types emanating from China. Presently there are no laws in China requiring COPY to be stamped on these fakes and many can be easily purchased on the internet.

BOOK REVIEW– IN YANKEE DOODLE'S POCKET

- Author - Will Nipper
- Large 9x11 format
- 568 Pages
- Availability—EBAY/
Internet
- Cost - About $65

This book is a college course in Early American Currency. If you want to know who, how, why, and where regarding colonial currency this is the book for you. The book begins with a short history of money in colonial times from wampum to coins and paper currency. Also discussed are cobs, milled dollars and other early currencies. The best part of this book is the section which identifies individual issues which circulated from 1616-1840. This book is not a valuation guide but has excellent information regarding history. Discussed are contemporary counterfeits, copies, and many varieties. The book is profusely illustrated with photos, tables and historical illustrations. If you ever wanted to know about early money in America, this book is for you. Doug Nyholm

YOUNG NUMISMATIST'S CORNER

- The Booker T. Washington Memorial Half Dollar was the first United States coin to have an image of an African-American. It was minted from the years 1946 to 1951.
- The inscription "E Pluribus Unum," meaning "One from Many" appeared on 1795 Liberty Cap-Heraldic Eagle gold $5 piece. This was the first time this motto was used on United States Coins.
- The United States Mint estimates that the average life expectancy of a circulating coin is about 30 years, whereas paper currency usually only lasts for as little as 18 months.
- The smallest denomination coin ever issued in the United States. was the half cent, which was minted from 1793 through 1857.
- There is more than $8 billion worth of coins circulating in the United States today. In the past 30 years, the United States Mint has minted over 300 billion coins, worth more than $15 billion.
- If one has three quarters, four dimes, and four pennies in your possession, they have the largest possible amount of money in United States coins without being able to make change for a dollar.
- The slang term for a United States dollar, "buck," is thought to have originated in the early United States frontier times when the hide of a male deer was a currency. The phrase "the buck stops here," was coined (pardon the pun) by United States President Harry Truman, and referenced the fact that a silver dollar coin was often passed around a poker table to show who was to pay the ante blinds.
- Calvin Coolidge was the first and only United States President to have his portrait appear on a coin minted while he was living.
